By far the biggest data-hogging element of WhatsApp is the photos, videos, and gifs that can quickly clog up your phone's storage.. cookielawinfo-checkbox-functional 11 months The cookie is set by GDPR cookie consent to record the user consent for the cookies in the category "Functional". WhatsApp has a few options for download settings- they're found in the 'Data and storage usage' menu. The options are broadly the same on both Android and iOS. You can select whether media will automatically download if you're relying on mobile data, connected to a Wi-Fi network, or never. Android also has the option to limit automatic downloads when you're roaming. By default WhatsApp will download images when you have a mobile data connection and video when you're connected to a Wi-Fi network. Changing these options to never, or only to download everything on Wi-Fi, can help to save some mobile data but also comes with the caveat that you'll have to tap each image or video when you want to download them. These are stored on your phone, but can also be saved to your camera roll. An updated version of WhatsApp now gives you more control over what media is stored on your phone. Clear everything out First, you want to start with a clear-out. Some of your longest running and most active WhatsApp chats most likely take up a sizeable chunk of your device's storage. WhatsApp has introduced some new storage management tools to help you take back control. Storage management may not be the most glamorous task, but it could help to improve your phone's performance pretty quickly. In WhatsApp, navigate to 'Settings' (found in the menu represented by three dots in the top right of WhatsApp), then 'Storage and data', and finally 'Manage storage'. This page shows a list of your conversations and how much storage each of them was using. Tap on a person or group and you'll see how many messages, contacts, photos, locations, gifs, videos, documents and audio messages are stored. You can "free up space" by selecting the option on screen and deciding which categories of data to get rid of from the chat.
